LOVE - INTRIGUE - COMEDY

A first rate tourist attraction must be original, entertaining, enjoyable and it must be seen only in one place. Tourists travel the world over to see unusual attractions. "Serafina" and "Stars in the West" can be annual attractions for San Diego. There has never been anything offered in San Diego, to compare with the possibilities of these Historical Operettas, excepting, the two great Expositions - 1915 and 1935, in our wonderful Balboa Park.

Why we offer these Operettas - The presentation of stage shows and etc., which have been produced for years, elsewhere, does not create prime tourist attractions of merit, for San Diego. Because as a travel far to see stage shows, which can be seen at home or nearby. which is regularly used on the radio or on records for home playing. and music are acceptable for amusement; but, they are in reality the well-informed and enlightened.

Civic Theatre located amidst the fine buildings of Balboa Park, which is world famous and the center of culture of San Diego. We have the Russ Auditorium which will suffice until a Civic Theatre can be provided. We have the fine buildings of Balboa Park, which is world famous and the center of culture of San Diego. Bath-Time Fun

Bath time can be fun for both mother and baby, but mother should take care to set the right note at the start. Most babies seem to take naturally to their baths, but at a time when everything is new and strange to them they need the feeling of security that only a confident, unhurried and cheerful mother can provide. Mother should talk gently and reassuringly to her little squirmers while she lathers him and rinses him off. If she laughs at his first tentative kicks and splashes he will be encouraged to laugh with her. She must hold him firmly to keep him from slipping down into the water, and to support his head and back, but a firm hold does not mean a tight clutch. Baby will struggle against a hold that is uncomfortable or that suggests tension on the part of the holder. If all the and baby has been encouraged to laugh, gurgle and splash while he is being bathed, he will love the after-bath lotion routine, the over-all application of a pure oil-and-water emulsion with lanolin and antiseptic added, which helps protect his tender skin from chafing, prickles and diaper rash. Unhampered by clothing, he will be free to stretch, kick and squirm while mother uses a cotton ball moistened with the lotion, to pat the lotion into each tiny crease and fold.

As baby gets older he will enjoy a floating toy in his bath. When he is old enough to graduate to the family bathtub some of the water can be let out after he has been bathed, and he can be allowed to play and splash about in the remaining five or six inches, while mother keeps a

Peach Ice Cream In Fruit Frame

Peach ice cream enjoys greatest use during July and August when the luscious peach season gets underway. Fresh of flavor and delicious by itself, this ice cream claims wonderful congeniality with other summer fruits in dessert array.

Melon and peaches are a natural in fruit cups; so trust their fruited harmony by serving a scoop of peach ice cream in a melon half. The famous Peach Melba dessert links a raspberry sauce to peaches and ice cream. For a delicious variation, use sweetened raspberries to top a peach ice cream sundae. Fresh peach slices themselves can accent the positive of a peach ice cream serving.

Many easy and attractive dessert combinations are possible with convenient pre-packaged peach ice cream. One can select a favorite fruit accompaniment when purchasing a pint or half-gallon of the ice cream. Always economical, pre-packaged ice cream is even more of a saving when purchased in the half-gallon carton containing 16 delicious portions.

Roll Out A New Kitchen

Grandmother's old rolling pin is back in fashion, not for chastising unruly husbands or creating melt-in-your-mouth pie crusts, but in an exciting new role as a tool that helps make home installation of Formica quick and easy for the average homemaker. Now the laminated plastics that were once considered in the luxury class have been brought within the budget of the average family with the introduction of new Contact Bond Cement.

With a minimum of inexpensive tools, including a fine-toothed coping saw and an ordinary rolling pin, it is said that anything from a major sink-top remodeling to covering a small end table can be completed with professional results. The plastic cuts out easily with a coping saw, and use of a paper pattern for complicated shapes is recommended. The adhesive is applied with a special sawtooth spreader that comes with the cement and allowed to dry for forty minutes. Then the Formica is laid in place and rolled flat with a rolling pin. This completes the simplified installation procedure. To finish off furniture, the edge can be beveled with a fine file and lacquered. For kitchens, a wide variety of chrome and stainless steel mouldings are available.

Combining the assets of easy cleaning with heat, acid and scratch resistance, and extreme durability, laminated plastic surfaces have unlimited home applications. Kitchens, of course, suggest new sink and counter tops, built-in breakfast bars and tables. Bathrooms can be modernized with the addition of new combination dressing-table sinks, built around existing plumbing. Furniture in fine woods with marred tops is rejuvenated with a choice from the wide range of wood-grain patterns. Most exciting and rewarding in terms of money saving are the possibilities of unpainted furniture, a big money saver in the home decor.

Autumn Ideal Time To Kill Rats, Mice

1 CLEAN UP RUBBISH—STACK LUMBER AND FIREWOOD

2 RATPROOF BUILDINGS WHEN PRACTICAL

3 PLACE RAT BAIT

The first cool autumn days should be your reminder to prepare for the invasion of rats and mice. Farms are especially susceptible, but protection should be provided in other places, too—homes, summer cottages and business places.

An effective anti-rat and mouse campaign, according to many pest control specialists, includes these three steps:

One—Remedy poor sanitation. Two—Ratproof buildings, when practical. Three—Place rat bait according to directions.

To assure good sanitation, remove all rubbish piles, and stack lumber and firewood neatly in racks at least one foot above ground level.

Ratproofing, Step No. 2, can effectively keep rats and mice out of corn cribs, granaries, warehouses, and all other places where feed is available. Bulletins describing ratproofing methods may be obtained from your county agricultural agent.

Baiting is the third and most effective blow in the autumn anti-rat campaign. Outstanding among the available rat and mouse killers is warfarin, a potent substance discovered in the laboratories of Dr. Karl Paul Link, Biochemistry Dept., University of Wisconsin, by Drs. Mark A. Stahmann, Miyoshi Ikawa, and Link.

Warfarin bait is recommended because: It kills all species of rats and mice common to the United States; it is a slow killer and does not create bait shyness; no pre-baiting is required; no tolerance develops; it is easy to use; it may be used in any climate or season at any temperature; it is comparatively safe to use; and it may be purchased as a concentrate or a ready-mixed bait.

In using warfarin bait, it must be made available to the rats and mice at all times. Bait stations—shallow containers protected with a board or a wooden box—are normally examined and replenished every 48 hours. A limited number of permanent bait stations will kill new arrivals and control reinvasion.

Good Breakfast Helps Athletes

If young Johnny aspires to be another "Red" Grange, Jesse Owens, or Ted Lyons—or if he just wants to be a good all-around athlete and student—he'd better look to his breakfast habits.

While everybody needs a good breakfast, nutritionists say, this is particularly true of teen-agers who for mental alertness and general good health must start the day with a good meal. Athletic directors agree.

K. L. "Tug" Wilson, president of the U. S. Olympic Association and commissioner of the Big Ten, credits improved nutrition, of which breakfast is a vital part, as an important factor in better performance of athletes today.

ners as a dietary pattern for his Olympic stars.

A. H. Pritzlaff, director of the Division of Health and Physical Education for Chicago's Board of Education, believes in teaching athletes the value of three well-balanced meals a day. "We do not advocate a 'training schedule' diet as such today," he said.

There has been a "vast improvement" in the physical condition of the average sports participant over the last 15 or 20 years, according to Pritzlaff, and much of this improvement is due to good diet and a greater knowledge of nutrition.

For teen-agers not so athletically inclined, breakfast is still a very important meal. Dr. Tug Wilson, former secre-

A good way to make sure lunches at your house reach expectations is to keep a supply of luncheon-building foods on the kitchen shelf. Give top priority to condensed soups, for they are star performers in summer meals. They are quickly and easily prepared. They provide variety. And they give cool sandwich-salad meals a warm heart. Too, soups are well-liked and nourishing.

mean much when you look at the whole picture of athletics from high school to Olympics today," Wilson said. "We may not produce another Owens for ten or twenty years, but it's the average boy you've got to consider. And there are thousands of average boys out-running, out-swimming and out-jumping their counterparts of a generation ago."

Charles Ornstein, who has supervised the feeding of America's inter-national athletic teams for 28 years, stresses good breakfasts, light lunches and big din-

"It helps an adolescent, who needs more of most foods than his or her parents, get enough calories and essential nutrients for growth and to withstand the Teenagers need not only more calories but also more protein such as they can get in bread and milk, meat and eggs."

And for everybody, Dr. Wilson and other nutritionists say that a good breakfast should include fruit or fruit juices, cereal, eggs and meat, enriched bread or toast, butter or margarine and a beverage.

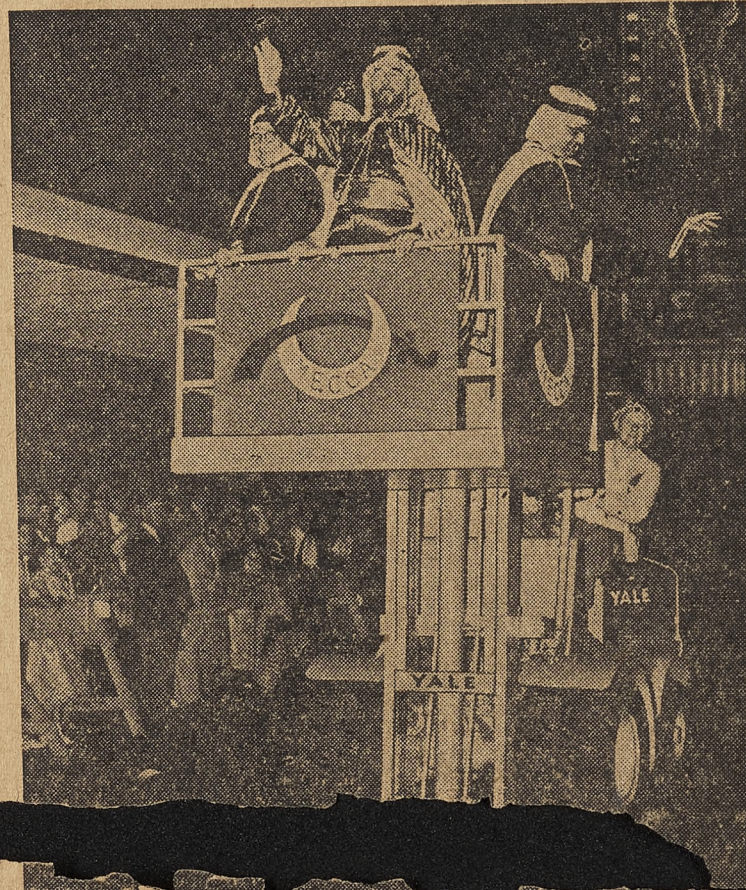

It is estimated by the Premium Advertising Association of America that about one billion dollars is spent annually for merchandise used as premiums in sales promotion. This included about 30 per cent of all U.S. made chinaware, 10 per cent of the aluminum and a wide variety of especially desirable items for the children. The fact that premium promotions for even the most common household items are so popular is a testament to the fact that there is hardly a person who does not have a favorite product or some article of value. This is assured of getting full value for the efforts of a group representing the Premium Association.

Not all premiums are of the same value. Many cities such as the one shown here... where all merchandise is sold at a discount. There are prize contests, combination sales, dealer or salesmen's awards, and many more... all of them mean one thing—"something extra" for somebody.

Who buys premiums as a rule—usually the most critical purchasers, housewives and children.

Dual-Use Furniture Pieces Available for Den-Bedroom

The spare bedrooms of many modern homes no longer get by with a life of idleness, according to Small Homes Guide. Today's plans call for this room to double as den-bedrooms or even as TV den-study-bedrooms.

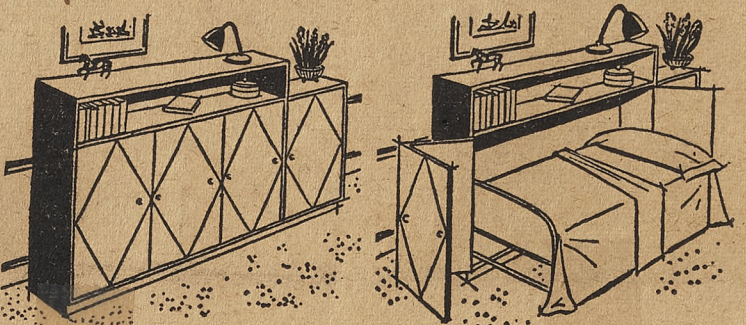

Fortunately, many dual-use furniture pieces are available for furnishing the den-bedroom—such as sofas that become beds, desks that convert into vanities and storage units that conceal beds. Those shown here are typical.

This studio couch can be converted to twin beds—or partially opened for additional seating space by day.

SUNDOWN ON THE PACIFIC SHORE

A novel about the Great West

BY RENAN PREVOST

Copyright by Renan Prevost, May 1955 All rights reserved

PREFACE

All thru the West there are Ghost Towns. Mostly in the region of the gold mines, of the wild, reckless days of 1849 and after. There are ruins of buildings and etc., which have a story, of the days, of glory and easy wealth for some men; and disappointment and tragic passing for other men.

About every city there are happenings of the past which are not always recorded: some men leave great names for their accomplishments, and land marks are named after them such as Parks, Streets and Schools. Also there are men, the workers who have "done the work" who are usually forgotten, with their passing on from this world. This story is about these men of great courage, supreme courage. Many of them arrived here without funds, and so gainful employment was necessary and that was work- hard work. Work not in line with their skill in a trade or profession.

Ghost towns have their story. So stories exist about buildings, water works, factories, railroads and other endeavors concerned with the earning of a livelihood. These stories become interesting, because they portray a life during the days of the past, almost forgotten. Great buildings or public utilities are usually known by the name of the man or corporation which caused the construction. Very seldom is any credit given to an architect, or the men who actually did the work. These were the men- "the brains" who were responsible for the erection of the structure or etc. And so this novel is about these "brains" and how they came West and what their life was like.

There are certain things effecting the economic welfare of men, which cause them to migrate. Generally it is promise of better living conditions or opportunities of easy attainment of wealth, thru land booms, new agricultural crops such as rare fruits, a better livable climate, as an aid to regain health, or as in the case of the colonization of this great country- an escape from persecution or oppression.

Men have been traveling to the West for generations, so we travel West with our characters, starting in 1880.

One Sunday night Grace and Tracy were having an argument. As the talking was getting louder and louder, Jerry started to go up the stairs to their rooms, but soon stopped when he heard, "So I don't satisfy you now, what?" said Grace.

"No, you don't. I had some fun at funny-ears place, one day when I was in the city."

"So; You two-timing rat. You stepped out on me more than once. You-all is no good"

"Sure, why not? You're too cold. What ails you anyhow?" rejoined Tracy. "I like city life and amusements."

"You married me, so you take me as I am. I was O. K. when you stayed home. You- You-" howled Grace.

Wham Bang, wham! something went through the air and landed with a crash.

Stop that, you fool. Do you want we'ens to git throd out of here? Stop it, do you hear me?" cautioned Tracy.

of here? Stop it, do you hear me?" cautioned Tracy.

"If anyone is thrown out it will be you. You- You-", retorted Grace.

"Wow, Ohooo, don't hit me, I'll be good," pleaded Tracy. "Don't you-hit me again."

Then the door opened, and out came Tracy, flying through the air, with the greatest of ease, and landing at the head of the stairs in a heap. He was groaning, both eyes were black, his clothes were torn, and he was bleeding at the mouth.

Then Grace came out with a heavy stove poker in her hand. "Alright, get up and never come back, you damned rat."

That was the last word from Grace, who returned to the room.

Then Jerry came up the stairs. "Well, Tracy, there is no place here for you, and don't go to Bill's place, either. Gather up your clothes and I will drive you to town."

Jerry went down the stairs and told the story to Dora. Then he took hold of Tracy's arm and they went out to the barn. The night was cool, as a heavy fog came in from the Ocean. It was somewhat refreshing, after the warm day.

Tracy, who was ashamed of himself, did not do any talking.

Arriving near town, Jerry said, "Do you have any money, Tracy?"

"No, none," he answered. "No suh, Boss-man I'se none."

"Here is what you have earned on my place, and here is where you get off. Good night."

Jerry returned home to the ranch, feeling sorry for himself.

In all farming communities there is always work for there who are not financially able to operate a farm for themselves. They are the hired hands, who usually do the hard work. In Lemondale, where there were several such families, all living in Mexican town, as it was called. They were a happy people. Not worrying about crops, lemons especially They did their work, received their wages and maybe they were better off than the people who employed them. When pay day came they were paid. But sometimes the employer, after producing a crop, found that the expenses consumed the total receipt of the crop, and there was very little remaining for himself. Many grove owners would not be able to continue if it had not been that there was an income from somewhere else, which helped to keep the place in operation. Five years is a long time to wait for a grove to come into production.

The Martinez, the De Vega, the Madrids, and the Ortega families. These happy sons of toil, and many of them very recent arrivals from the land of Manana, below the border, were real workers.

Life in their families, was very happy. If misfortune came to one household all the friends would help to alleviate it as much as possible. If a woman was widowed with children, by an untimely death of the husband, it was not many months before she married up with a widower, who usually had children. Then it was a case of your children and my playing with our children.

Mexican town was off to the foot of the hill across the railroad tracks, where the packing house was located. There were children, many of them, a happy, care free lot, talking Spanish like their parents, and as a parental inheritance, they talked very fast with the shortly rolled R.

The older children, after Sunday Mass, would usually walk to the nearby lake or park. If they had money, they would ride to the beach. Going by train from Lemondale, and arriving home on the last train during the night.

Life in Lemondale was a simple, dull affair. Lemons

Color when they were picked, were sold promptly. The ripe lemons, or the yellow lemons, were sold promptly. Usually they were considered the poorest quality, but in reality, so far as juice is concerned, they are the best, for prompt use. The other lemons, those picked green, were stored in cool places, usually in the basement of the packing house, being stored for about three months. They were referred to as cured lemons. These lemons were considered the best quality; especially for the shipment to Eastern markets. The color changed during the storing period, and it became bright yellow. Whereas the tree ripened lemons, those that were yellow when picked; were really not a bright yellow. The color was yellow with a faint green tinge; or sometimes referred to as dirty yellow.

One advantage of the lemon business was that the harvest, or heaviest pickings came in the Spring, when picking was according to size for storing, or curing. The best sales demand comes in the hot Summer months of July, August and September. That is one of the reasons for the harvest for storing and curing. There are two main varieties of lemons. The Eureka, a more or less Spring and early Summer lemon. The Lisbon, a Winter lemon; the bulk of the harvest maturing in the very early months of the year. Most all of the Lisbon variety required storing for curing. Also there were some hybrids, which matured at in between periods. The lemon is considered matured, when there is some juice in them, regardless of color.

Irrigation was necessary most all the year; excepting in the wet season when and it was wet. There has been times when irrigation was necessary the whole year.

The top eight or ten inches of soil was kept worked up, so as to be able to make irrigation ditches in which to run the water. Irrigation was done usually every six weeks, or as some would say, "follow the pickers." The picking crew usually came about that often. Then when the irrigation was completed, the whole land was harrowed, to level the irrigation ditches and to make a dust mulch. This operation made it possible for the picking crew to attend the harvest. The mulch was supposed to conserve the moisture in the land. However, that was questioned by some growers.

The lemon business had its headaches. Spraying was necessary once a year; for red scale and red spider control. Also there was the yearly pruning. The taking off of the old wood, the suckers and dead wood; all of which allowed the growth of new wood. It has been said that new wood, fruit bearing wood; must be grown every two years. That fruit wood is the small branches and twigs, which bear the crop.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

The Rabbit Drive.

Trees Sold.

A year had passed and Mr. Sleazack had not paid his note for the trees.

"Mr. Todd, I have come to offer you one-half of the lemon grove, as payment on that note. Five acres should be satisfactory to you," said Mr. Sleazack.

"I don't care much about taking that deal. Your acreage is too far from here."

"Sorry, that is the best that I can do. Times are hard, and it is all I can do to meet expenses, and besides, five acres is enough for me," allowed Mr. Sleazack.

"You will give me a clear title to five acres of lemon grove as payment for all the trees you took?" asked Jerry.

"Yes, that is right."

"Well, I will accept it," allowed Jerry.

"Good afternoon, then I will bring you the deed next week."

Jerry went to the house and told Dora about the deal.

"I guess that is all right, Jerry, but we do need the money so much."

"Yes, I know. But Sleazack does not have any money, and his offer is a good deal for us. We can sell the five acre grove. Maybe do all right on the deal."

"Yes, maybe. But if you can't sell it, then it will be more work for us to do," allowed Dora.

"We will sell it the first chance that we get. Believe me," said Jerry.

Every six weeks Jerry went to the North Grove, as he named the Sleazack place, to irrigate the trees. It was his turn to have the water.

Try as he would, it was impossible to sell the place.

Coming home through Wildcat Canyon Jerry always shot some rabbits for fresh meat. It was an hour's drive each way.

on the farms and estates. They hardly lot of God worshipping men and women. Their desires in this life are few. Merely a fair living and they all expected to earn that living. Truly, they never had to worry about crop failures, water shortage, and unprofitable markets for lemons and other farm crops.

Their children were happy and usually singing. Above all, they highly respected the village Catholic Priest, a man of learning and with sympathy for all.

PART THREE

Jerry's farm was like most farms. There was always some pest or rodent to fight. He had plenty of trouble with wild rabbits. They were very large. Fresh rabbit meat could always be had every morning. He had his place fenced, with rabbit proof wire four feet high. A few shots through the wire with his 12-gauge shotgun, easily provided the fresh meat.

There were many nursery trees ready for setting into orchards. He had many thousands of them, and more growing, which would be ready for budding soon.

Twitcher had sold plenty of his land and many of the purchasers were coming to Jerry for trees. He sold thousands at one dollar each.

There was also a profitable sideline for Jerry. As the rabbits were plentiful, it was necessary to fence the groves, so Jerry had a carload of wire fencing, which he sold.

As in any business, all the sales were not without some grief. One day a man drove up to the nursery. He had a very nice buggy, a span of fine bay horses and a negro driver. When he was opposite the nursery, a negro man was standing, the visitor hollered out.

"Hey, there, are these trees yours, and are they for sale?"

Jerry was very much surprised at the uncouth man, so he walked over, and remarked:

"Whv yes. I have some trees ready for orchard planting. How many do you want?"

"I will take one thousand at thirty-five cents each. When can my man come and get them? Tomorrow?"

Surprised at this sort of business Jerry started to walk away, but stopped and said, "I don't know who you are, but the price of the trees is one dollar each, the same price to everybody."

"My name is Timking, I have a large ranch about fifteen miles up the Sweetwater River. My ranchman tells me that the trees can be grown for about thirty-five cents each. I need one thousand. When can I get them?"
